

Karl Marx Selections by Peter Schendralis in Berkeley University, 1968

By Peter Schendralis

I. Who Knows What and How does it all Work?

Well Marx argues, who knows what and how does it all work? It might seem entirely in fact nonsensical and false consciousness like therefore to argue – only Marxists interpret the world correctly and change it.

II. A Complex Selection from Karl Marx – Thesis on Feurbach, Edited to Contemporary Affairs by Schendralis and Taught in the following Way

Philosophers interpret the world.

Marxists add change the world.

Now talk about this problem of understanding the world, its news, and even its manufacturing of consent.

Now also add something like a job. Working for companies or universities.

Add how that becomes a common job like affair. Of just following the world the same way as parties.

I mean companies argue they cannot follow the world well. A Marx quote for it –

“We will then know how to interpret the world and then we understand it.”

It is daily bread for Marxists to prove this to anyone.
